ARGUMENT.

In a public square of the city of Madrid, a band of gipsies are levying contributions on the populace, in recompense for the songs and dances with which they amuse them. With this tribe is Maritana, a young girl of extraordinary beauty of person, and a vocalist of more than common talent. The gay King, Charles the Second of Spain, has seen her, and is smitten with her charms. At the end of one of her lays, he gives her a coin of value, and hastens away; but his disguise does not conceal him from the keen eyes of Don Jose, his minister, who, to carry out his own designs upon the Queen, resolves to aid in converting the fair young gipsy to the purposes of the King. He praises her beauty, excites her ambition, and awakens in her heart hopes of future grandeur and prosperity. At this moment, Don Cæsar de Bazan comes reeling from a tavern, where he has lost his last maravedi in gambling. His costume, once rich, is now ragged and dirty; his handsome person bears marks of dissipation and poverty; yet, in his air and bearing, there is still something noble and prepossessing. Don Jose and he have been friends in brighter days, and recognizing each other, Don Cæsar briefly recapitulates the downward steps that have led him to his present condition. Lazarillo, a poor, forlorn boy, who has just attempted to destroy himself, now attracts Don Cæsar's attention, and tells him the story of his wrongs. Don Cæsar becomes his friend, and is soon embroiled in a quarrel, which leads to a duel. Now, an edict has been passed, to punish with death all who engage in that mode of settling disputes, and Don Cæsar is arrested and conveyed to prison, while Don Jose promises Maritana an introduction to Court on the morrow.

At the commencement of the Second Act, we find Don Cæsar asleep in prison, while the boy Lazarillo watches near him. Don Cæsar is condemned to die at seven, and the hands of the clock point to five as he awakes: but two hours' life remain to him; yet he is gay, and ridicules all attempts to condole with him. Don Jose now enters, and, professing friendship for Don Cæsar, makes a proposition to him whereby his wish to die a soldier's death may be gratified on one condition—namely, that he shall marry! The alternative is to be hanged like a dog, or be married, and afterwards shot like a gentleman. For the last-named privilege, Don Cæsar consents to suffer matrimony for an hour and three-quarters. The Don assumes gay apparel for his wedding, and partakes of a banquet in honor of his nuptials. The preparations for his execution in military style proceed, but Lazarillo adroitly abstracts the messengers of death. At length, the hour arrives, and Don Cæsar is led forth to be shot, as the scene changes to a saloon in the Palace Montefiori, in which a festival is at its height. In the midst of the revelry, a volley of musketry is heard at a distance; this startles the guests, but the dance is soon resumed.

Don Jose, ever intent on the consummation of his deep-laid plans against the honor of the Queen, introduces Maritana to the Marquis and Marchioness de Montefiori, and they, being his dependants, agree to present her to the King as their long-lost niece. The King makes warm and passionate professions to Maritana, and Don Jose promises to ensure their meeting at an appointed hour. As the King retires, Don Cæsar, disguised as a monk, joins the revellers, and claims of Don Jose his wife! Don Jose is confounded, but, prompt in stratagems, he contrives to introduce the ugly old Marchioness to Don Cæsar as his bride. Of course, Don Cæsar is horror-struck! He repudiates her, but still believes himself deceived; and, hearing the voice of Maritana, he is confirmed in his belief. He becomes enraged, and demands his true wife. Don Jose orders his arrest, and that also of Maritana, and these two are borne away in different directions, as the Second Act ends.

The unhappy Maritana now pines in a villa belonging to the King, and Don Jose still secretly carries on his base designs against her honor, so that the King's infidelity may serve him as a stepping-stone to the Queen's favor. But Maritana is pure, and disregards all the King's proffers of wealth and luxury. Don Cæsar again arrives, at a fortunate moment, in search of his wife, and encountering the King, whom he does not recognize, a most amusing interview follows. The King is called away in haste, and Maritana and Don Cæsar meet, their love is mutual, and the plot of Don Jose is overthrown. His treason to the King, and intended villainy to the Queen, become apparent. Don Jose falls beneath Don Cæsar's sword. Don Cæsar secures his bride and an appointment as Governor of a distant city, beyond the reach of his creditors.

Don Jose. (advancing) He! It is the third time I have discovered him on this spot.

Maritana. (to the King.) Good signor, haven't you a single maravedi at the bottom of your purse? It might better requite a poor singer than those forlorn looks. (The King gives her money, then exits hastily. L. 2. E.) A quadruple of gold! I can scarcely believe I am not dreaming again.

Don Jose. You have received a good offering this morning, eh, my little syren?

Maritana. Yes, a golden quadruple! He must be some very rich man!

Don Jose. Very: Don Arias Count of Fuentes, the most opulent gentleman in Spain. (Aside.) Your Majesty's secret is worth possessing. I shall improve my acquaintance with this handsome Gitana; her star is in the ascendant. (Aloud.) So, my little mountain fairy, what song will you sing me, for the fellow to that golden piece, which glitters still in your pretty hand?

Maritana. Sing? Anything, signor—what shall it be?

Don Jose. Let me recollect. Oh, the legend which you warbled to the Queen yesterday; her Majesty stopped her carriage to listen to you, I was told Maritana. That is no more than truth, signor.

Don Jose. It must have been an interesting ditty.

Maritana. A mere romance, popular in Madrid, said often to have been heard at midnight, in some old ruined palace of the Moorish kings, far over the mountains yonder;— they call it the "Harp in the air."

Don Jose. By all means, sing it.

Maritana. Willingly, signor,—but I must first summon my attendant spirits. (Beckoning forward the Gipsies for chorus.

DON JOSE. Why do you sigh in contemplating your gains?

MARITANA. Because they are still too little, or too much, Signor.

MARITANA. Too much for remunerating songs of a poor Gitana, and too little to confirm the dreams of splendor which nightly occupy my slumbers.

DON JOSE. Ah! a Gitana, then, has her dreams of greatness.

DON JOSE. (aside.) The vain little coquette.

MARITANA. You laugh at my folly, signor?

D. JOSE. Not in the least: what better, to command wealth than such a passport of beauty?

MAR. Ah, signor, now indeed, I know you are jesting with me! [Cry without of "the QUEEN!"

MAR. Listen! There's the Queen passing through the grand square. If I could only attract her notice again! Adieu, signor, ambitious as I am, I can still remember to be grateful.

[Exit R. U. E. singing "Of fairy wand," &c.

D. JOSE. Au revoir, ma belle Maritana! Yes, yes, your aspiring dreams will come to pass, since, through your influence over the heart of the King, Don Jose looks to realize his own over that of the neglected Queen. Once persuaded of her husband's infidelity, might not the incensed wife be induced to look, even from her throne, for an object worthy of assisting her just revenge? Then, Don Jose — yes, yes, Maritana, your dreams will come to pass, and speedily! (Noise.) Ah! whom have we here?

[Enter DON CÆSAR, from D. Hotel of somewhat humble description, R. 2. E. evidently a little inebriated.]

DON CÆSAR. Miserable knaves! why, they cheat at cards without conscience, as if they were privileged, like our nobles of Madrid. Oh, if it were no dishonor to my sword to chastise such canaille! Robbed, plundered of my last maravedi! I shall sup on cold air to-night, and sleep—where I shall have the whole blue expanse above for my bed curtains!—ha! ha! ha!

D. JOSE. Am I mistaken? No, it is Don Cæsar de Bazan!

D. CÆSAR. Don Jose de Santarem?

D. JOSE. The same. It is long since we met, Don Cæsar; you have been sometime absent from Madrid?

D. CÆSAR. On my travels.

D. JOSE. They say travel changes a man. (Regarding him.)

D. CÆSAR. And his apparel? (Laughing.) Ha! ha! ha!

D. JOSE. Your noble father left you a high name, and a brilliant inheritance.

D. CÆSAR. The name I still bear: the inheritance benefits mankind.

D. JOSE. You had numerous followers!

D. CÆSAR. So I have still—creditors! Go where I may, they are sure to follow me; and, as I am very fond of change, by my valor, but I give them some trouble to run after me. Ha! ha! ha!

D. Jose. (L.) And what happy event has restored you to your native city?

D. Caesar. [R.] Hope! the rainbow hope! that my creditors were all dead! Alas! creditors, like the imperishable laurel, never die! But, tell me, what news here? drink they the same, and fight as many duels as formerly?

D Jose. Duels have become rare in Madrid since the edict of the king.

D. Caesar. What edict?

D. Jose. One which declares that all who fight with the sword, shall be shot; except during Holy-week, and then the survivor is condemned to be—

D. Caesar. What?

D. Jose. Hanged.

D. Caesar. Um! If I mistake not, Holy-week commenced today.

D Jose. Exactly so.

D. Caesar. Then, I must keep out of a passion. Hanged! I shouldn't survive the disgrace. (Noise without.) Ha! ha! ha! What is all this?

[Enter Lazarillo and Boatman. L. U. E.]

Boatman. Foolish boy! I insist on conducting you to your friends.

Laz. [R.] Why did you prevent me from drowning myself? I wish to die.

D. Caesar. [C.] Eh! Die at your age? Drown yourself? You cannot have many creditors, surely?

Laz. No, signor; but I am apprenticed to a stern master—an armorer—who, under pretence that the corslets were not kept bright, beat me again today.

D. Caesar. Again! Hath he beaten thee ere now?

Laz. Yes, signor, frequently; 'till I can no longer endure it. I prefer death! (Terrified. Crossing to L. U. E.) Ah, they come to arrest me.

D. Caesar. (opposing himself.) Fear nothing. I'll interpose

Laz. Alas! that captain will not hear of pity.

MAR. (singing as she went out.) You here, still, signor? Ah, I have seen our beautiful Queen looking so amiable! Diamonds, too, glittering brilliantly! Delightful!

DON J. (aside.) This Gitana! who knows?—that fool, Don Cæsar too—they might be rendered subservient to my purpose! (To MARITANA.) Still dreaming of greatness, eh?

MAR. Ah, signor, if I had but your opportunity of going to court, and seeing all the splendor—why you might speak to the King!

DON J. I prefer speaking to you.

MAR. Me! The time is badly chosen just now, for here are numbers of people who will require of me to tell their fortunes. Shall I tell yours, signor?

DON J. By and by, (apart) anon you shall learn your own.

Don Cæsar. Still two hours to live. Deuce! what made me wake so early? Dreaming, too, my creditors were all transported to the moon. Ha! ha! Still two hours! Boy, how shall I pass the time?

Laz. Signor?

Don Cæsar. If but two hours of life were thy whole remain of grief or joy in this world—answer me truly, scapegrace—how would'st employ thyself—eh?

Laz. (bowing.) Pardon, signor; I would send for a priest, and confess my sins.

Don Cæsar. Ha! ha! What, confess my sins in two hours! Two hours might serve for thee, boy; but for me, two years would scarce suffice. Well thought—I'll make my will—no, that would scarce occupy two minutes.

Laz. Alas! and is there no one, signor, might supplicate the King to spare thy life?

Don Cæsar, (reflecting) No. no, boy! No one cares whether I'm shot or hanged!

Laz. No one?

Don Cæsar. No one! Yes—one—

DON CÆSAR. Don Jose in my prison!

DON JOSE. Ought that to surprise you? Am I not an old friend? As first minister, I would exert my influence to serve you.

D. CÆSAR. Serve me! (Looking at clock.) I have scarcely two hours to live.

D. JOSE. Have you no last request?

D. CÆSAR. Um! none. (Recollecting.) Yes; yonder boy, who has just quitted us, I, somehow, take an interest in his

D. JOSE. Is he not the cause of your death?

D. CÆSAR. Inadvertently. I owe him that — but, then, I owe something to everybody.

D. JOSE. You wish me to take the lad into my service, perhaps?

D. CÆSAR. That is my wish.

D. JOSE. It shall be done; what more?

D. CÆSAR. Nothing.

D. JOSE. No! Is the last of the Garofas, then, content to perish like —

D. CÆSAR, (troubled.) Hush! I fear to think of such ignominy. If his Majesty would but confer upon me the happiness of falling like a soldier.

DON JOSE. I pledge my honor to see this performed, on condition—

DON CÆSAR. Condition to me! What is it?

D. JOSE. You must marry—

D. CÆSAR. Marry! I! What, for an hour and three-quarters? You are jesting.

D. JOSE. No! Quite the contrary.

D. CÆSAR. Ah! then, I see, it's my name you require?

D. JOSE. Perhaps—

D. CÆSAR. To elevate some antique maiden, who sighs to become a countess—fifty years of age, no doubt?

D. JOSE. It is immaterial to you.

D. CÆSAR. And ugly as a gorgon, eh?

D. JOSE. You will never behold her.

D. CÆSAR. How! Am I to marry an invisible woman?

D. JOSE. Her features will be rendered invisible to you by a thick veil, which will also prevent her seeing you; but you must give your honor not even to demand her name. Will you consent to take such a woman for your wedded wife?

D CÆSAR. I will! and I give my word to ask no questions whatever. Ha! ha! And why not marry? Mind, on condition that I am to be shot instead of hanged.

D. JOSE. Agreed.

D. CÆSAR. And that I see and carouse with the brave fellows commissioned to dispatch me!

D. JOSE. Strange request! however, be it so; a banquet shall be served, and your guards attend; and, as your costume is somewhat unbridegroomlike, you'll find apparel more suiting the occasion, in yonder chamber. (Points R. H. D.) Please you, put it on.

D. CÆSAR. Oh! by all means. Attention to costume is necessary when one becomes a bridegroom. Ha! ha!

[Exit R. H. D.

D. JOSE. Yes, yes, ma belle Maritana, my prediction of thy advancement cometh quickly to pass—married to Don Cæsar, the widowed Countess of Garofa may approach so near the King, as to be ever fascinating his eyes and heart—but will Maritana consent to this blindfold marriage? I'll tell her 'tis the Queen's command.

[Enter LAZARILLO, (L.) giving a paper to DON JOSE.]

D. JOSE. For me! (Opens and reads it aside.) Um! the King's pardon for Don Cæsar! It will not suit the first minister's policy that this should arrive at present. (Puts it in his vest.) Boy, at the request of Don Cæsar, I admit you at once into my service.

LAZ. Thanks, signor—to-morrow.

D. JOSE. Why not to-day?

LAZ. To day, he lives, who dies, alas, for me! I cannot forsake him till—(agitated.) To-morrow, signor, I shall be as devoted to your service, as I am now to his.

D. JOSE. As thou pleasest. Go, tell them at the hotel, yonder, in my name, to serve a banquet for at least twenty, and say to the Captain of the Guard, I would speak to him in the outer room. [Exit LAZARILLO (L.)

D. JOSE. It is a desperate game I am playing, but the very thought of possessing the Queen brings memory back to the happy time I first beheld and loved her.

During the waltz the fortress clock strikes seven; a roll of musketry is heard in the distance, the dance stops suddenly; MARCHIONESS advances.

MARCH. Holy Madelina, what sound was that? my nerves are absolutely aspen leaves.

MARQ. Sweet, my Lady Marchioness, subdue this terrific sensibility; yonder sound, fair excellence, was a — a mere nothing; some ruffianly soldier, for drawing his sword in Holy week, condemned (as one of my rascals informed me) to be shot at seven o'clock.

MARCH. (with affectation.) Dear me, Marquis, was that all. What a noise they make about trifles. Pray continue the dance.

(Enter DON JOSE, C.D.R.)

D. JOSE. Marquis!

MARQ. I'm enchanted to behold—

D. JOSE. Suppress these raptures, Monsieur le Marquis, and listen to me: I have conducted hither your niece, whom you lost some ten years ago.

MARQ. My niece? Impossible! I have no niece, signor.

D. JOSE. Oh yes, you have; when I gave you the appointment of Grand Director of the Royal Menagerie, you promised to recollect whatever I wished — stretch your memory a little, Monsieur le Marquis — I say you have a long lost niece.

MARQ. Oh, certainly, Don Jose; now you remind me, I recollect my pretty little niece well enough. Where is the dear infant?

D. JOSE. Infant? um! during ten years absence she is wonderfully grown up, of course.

MARQ. Certainly, she must be in such a lapse of time; where is she? I'm all impatience. Is she handsome? like the family?—does she resemble me?

D. JOSE, (leading in MARITANA, C.D.L.) Judge for yourself; here she is! Madame la Countess de Bazan. Madame—Monsieur le Marquis de Montefiori, your noble uncle.

MAR. A Marquis my—

MAR But I thought Don Cæsar de Bazan, at seven o'clock this evening, was expected to—

D. JOSE. Join the present party of course; yes, and this way, I perceive, he approacheth. You will apprise the Marchioness, your wife of the return of her lovely relative—I'll follow instantly, and—(bows the MARQUIS out.)

(Enter the KING, R H.D.)

MAR. (joyfully, then with chagrin.) He! No! another?

D. JOSE, (presenting MARITANA to the KING.) The Countess! (Bows, and goes up to the MARQUIS, who is explaining to the MARCHIONESS the suggestions of DON JOSE. The company is invited to withdraw, as if to take refreshments.)

(MUSIC, as all exit, C.D. but KING and MARITANA.)

KING. Charming Maritana, my beauteous bride!

MAR. Bride!

KING, (with great tenderness.) Oh! yes: mine. I could not live without thee. It seemeth to me, beautiful Maritana, as if love's bright genius had but created thy sweet presence to render this world and earthly paradise.

(Enter D. JOSE, hastily, C.D.L.)

D. JOSE, (whispering,) Sire, the guests return to the Saloon—withdraw, I beseech, or recognized—

KING. And Maritana?

D. JOSE, (whispers.) Her, at the appointed hour, you'll find at the Villa d'Aranguez—Sire, they come!

KING. I depart, remember! (Gazing at MARITANA.) Maritana! (Sighs.) [Exit, R.H.D.

MARI. (joyfully.) Gone! Am I free?

D. JOSE. Yes, he is gone! you are free (aside) till midnight. Go, join the festivity, and anticipate every happiness: they come to invite you.

(Enter the MARQUIS, L., inviting MARITANA to join the dance.)

MARQ. Sweet niece, shall we electrify them with a saraband, eh!

MARI. Dance? Willingly! The departure of yon dark stranger has removed a cloud from my heart; and a secret monitor whispers me, that a much dearer object is not far distant, whose presence will quickly confirm every anticipated joy. (Exit MARITANA and MARQUIS, C.D.L.)

D. JOSE. She little dreams that other is no more! (exultingly.)

(Enter DON CÆSAR, disguised as a Monk, C.D.)

D. CÆSAR, (touching him.) Don Jose!

D. JOSE. That voice! Who art thou?

D. CÆSAR, (unmasking.) Don Cæsar, at your service!

D. JOSE. Alive!

D. CÆSAR. Yes, some benevolent fairy, I presume, withdrew the bullets from the arquebusses; not liking to disgrace, I won't say disappoint, my executioners, I fell; pretended to be shot, they walked away—I walked hither.

D. JOSE. For what purpose?

D. CÆSAR. To claim my wife.

D. JOSE. Your wife! who told you she was here?

D. CÆSAR, (laughing.) The same good fairy that withdrew the bullets from the arquebusses; where is she?

D. JOSE, (pointing, R.) In that room; find her out yourself.

D CÆSAR. I will! Oh! I should know her from a thousand, if only by the softness of her small white hand.

(Exit, R.)

D. JOSE. How to mislead him?

(Enter MARQUIS, C.D.L.)

D. JOSE, (aside.) Ah! this creature!—(Aloud)—Where's your wife?

MARQ. Receiving the adulations of her adoring guests, as her lovely white hand touches the trembling lute! O—h!

(Sighs.)

D. JOSE. Ah! I have an appointment in my gift—Grand Master of the Aviary. Instruct the Marchioness to play a part as I direct, and the appointment is yours.

MARQ. I! Grand Master of the Royal Aviary, with a pension of—. What part is the divine Marchioness to play, Don Jose? Is it on the lute! She'll suspend your every faculty with a single chord!

D. JOSE. Bah! lute! no, no, I'll tell you. (Exeunt, L.)

(Re-enter DON CÆSAR, R)

D. CÆSAR.* I seek my wife in vain, for like some phantom she still eludes me. Thus are fondest hopes ever fading. Nought remains for me but dreamy memories.

* If following song is sung in the last act, substitute in place of above lines.

D. CÆSAR, (angrily.) No wife there. Don Jose is trifling with me. I'll demand satisfaction.

D. CÆSAR, (laughing.) Don't be indignant on my account, good marquis. (Whispering.) But even you, who are twice my age, would prefer single-blessedness to a precious piece of antiquity for a wife like that.

MARQ. Antiquity! If you don't admire her yourself, don't attempt to dishearten others. (Retreats angrily with MARCHIONESS, C.D.)

D. JOSE. Then you renounce a bride who has married you for your name alone?

D, CÆSAR. Can you ask it?

[Exit R. H. D. Noise of a carriage heard.]

[Enter LAZARILLO. From balcony.]

LAZ. Madame, from the balcony, I perceive a carriage; it is Don Jose de—eh! not here! I see—again plunged in melancholy. What can this mystery be? and who is yonder lady, so secluded?—A prisoner in this palace.

[Enter DON JOSE. L. H. D.]

D. JOSE. Lazarillo!

LAZ. Signor. (Bowing.)

D. JOSE. (In an under tone.) Where's the lady?

LAZ. (Points off the stage. R.) There, signor.

D. JOSE. Um! You saw the cavalier who spoke to me yesterday? Did you know his features?

LAZ. Yes, signor; they are stamped on every piastre in Spain—it was the King.

D. JOSE. True—but mind you make no mistake; nevertheless, if your memory fail in the least, look on this likeness, (gives him gold.) and when he comes here to-night—

LAZ. The King, signor?

D. JOSE. (Whispers.) Aye, boy, the King—mind, none else must be admitted.

LAZ. Should any other attempt?

D. JOSE. Desire him, from the lattice, there, to depart; if he refuse, be ready with your arquebuss, and fire at him.

LAZ. I obey, signor. (Bows and exits, balcony.)

D. JOSE. Having no real authority for the detention of Don Cæsar, he is, unfortunately, still at liberty, and in Madrid; luckily, however, his ignorance of the King's pardon will keep him out of the way, for fear of a re-apprehension; and the King, amused by the sparkling eyes of the Gitana, will utterly forget the beauteous Queen, that bright idol which he no longer worships, but for one of whose sweet smiles Don Jose would how gladly perish.

(Re-enter MARITANA, R.)

MARI. That voice!

D. JOSE. Ah! the Countess—

MARI. You! Oh, do not mock me by that title.

D. JOSE Nay, it is your own, but you appear uneasy; have I not kept my word? (Smiling.)

MARI. (despondingly.) Perfectly. I am a Countess,—I reside in a costly palace. Every desire of my proud heart, save one, has come to pass.

D. JOSE. And that one is, your husband? (Making a signal off the stage, L.) Your cup of delight is now brimful, your husband arrives.

(Enter LAZARILLO, showing in the KING, L.H.D.)

MARI. Husband! he? (Retreats.)

[D. JOSE retires with LAZARILLO.

KING, (detaining her.) Lovely Maritana, do not fly me. Wherefore tremble? Fear'st thou me?

MARI. (sighing.) Indeed, yes!

KING. Thou art unhappy?

MARI. (sadly.) Indeed, indeed; yes!

KING. Wherefore?

MARI. Pardon! This strange marriage—thou, so exalted, I so humble!

KING, (frowning.) I exalted! Who hath told thee?

MARI. That brow severe—that lofty bearing; yes, yes, I feel so high thou art, I tremble to raise to thee one inquiring look.

KING. Courage, sweet Maritana! Were the earth at my command, I'd give thee all. Don Jose told me thou would'st fondly receive my affection.

MARI. Don Jose falsely rear'd this delusion, haply to enrich himself with thy wealth.

KING. Wealth! and thou would'st possess it also, shall flow like the golden shower of Danae into thy lap.

MARI. I—I disregard affluence.

KING. Nay, Maritana; doth it grieve thee thy husband is endowed with riches!

MARI. Willingly would I share poverty with one who shared my heart.

KING, (tenderly.) Listen to me, beautiful Maritana—listen!

MARI. You are my lord—I must obey.

KING. Obey! Oh, it is too cold a word. (A shot heard.) An intruder into the presence of—(checking himself.) Go in till this be past; I'll follow soon, believe.

MARI. (aside.) Ah me! unlucky Maritana. (Exit, R.H.D.)

KING, (looking after her.) The prize is mine! at length she believes all—all. (DON CÆSAR appears in balcony.)

KING. Ah! a man here! (Stands aside to observe.)

(LAZARILLO fires again without.)

D. CÆSAR. That's one way of receiving a gentleman, by sending a bullet through his brains!

(Enter LAZARILLO, BALCONY, the arquebuss in his hand.)

LAZ. Don Cæsar! (Disappears.)

D. CÆSAR, (looking about.) Eh? who knows me? (Sees the KING.) Pardon, Signor, I did not perceive you.

KING. Why come you in at the window?

D. CÆSAR. Refused admittance at the door, the window was the only way. Egad! a man needs a stout courage to storm a fortress under such a brisk cannonade. (Shaking a bullet from his hat.) It is but to show the tip of one's feather above yon corridor, and whiz comes a bullet at your head. Spirit of Hospitality, how are thy rights abused!

KING, (sternly.) I am master here, and insist on knowing your motive for this intrusion.

D. CÆSAR. Well, then, since you are master of the house, I come to seek the Countess de Bazan! They say she lives here!

KING. The Countess? Do you know her?

D. CÆSAR. Ha! ha! ha! She's the acquaintance of ten minutes only;—but if you are master here, tell me where to find her?

KING, (indignantly.) I tell! I! Are you aware signor, that I am—

D. CÆSAR. Who?

KING, (in confusion.) Wh—o! Don Cæsar de Bazan! (Seating himself.)

D. CÆSAR, (aside.) Parbleu! I must chastise this impostor. (Touches his sword.)

LAZ. (appearing at the balcony.) It is the King! (Aside and disappears.)

D. CÆSAR. Ha! The King! here, at this hour!

KING. And who, signor, pray may you happen to be? Your name!—

D. CÆSAR. My name! Oh, if you are Don Cæsar de Bazan, (putting on his hat,) I am the King of Spain!

KING, (rising.) You! King of—ha! ha! ha!

D. CÆSAR. Sire, I bear a mission.

KING. A mission!—thou? From whom?

D. CÆSAR. Sire, from the Queen! who would save Maritana!

KING. How! did they dare admit thee to the presence of her Majesty?

D. CÆSAR. No, Sire, they did not admit me by the portal, therefore climbed I the garden wall, resolved to cast myself, unlooked for, at her Majesty's feet.

KING, (angrily.) What sought you of the Queen? Audacious?

D. CÆSAR. To save my wife: that effort saved my King!

KING. Thy King!

D. CÆSAR. At least, his honor! To avoid the notice of the guards, hidden behind the foliage, I heard, in converse deep, two voices, a woman's and a man's. Shall I go on?

KING. Proceed.

D. CÆSAR. "Madam, you are betrayed," said the cavalier to the lady; "the King to-night meeteth his mistress in yonder villa."

D. CÆSAR. Don Jose!

KING, (Crosses to L.H.D.) Unlock the door, I say, and let me forth!

D CÆSAR. Sire, thou would'st arrive too late.

KING. Too late, say'st—

D. CÆSAR. Think'st thou Don Cæsar de Bazan spared the man, who, though scorned by his Queen, to whom he spoke of love, would have betrayed his King? No, Sire; by this true hand the traitor fell. I have done my utmost to preserve thine honor, can'st thou destroy mine? (Kneels.)

KING, (much affected, and making a sign to MARITANA, who gives him DON CÆSAR'S sword.) No, Don Cæsar, and may that loyal sword which has so preserved the dignity of your King, ever defend, with equal bravery, thine own. Rise! I hear footsteps. Now, unlock the door. (DON CÆSAR unlocks the door.)

(Enter LAZARILLO, OFFICERS, &c., of the King's Household, L H.D.)

NOBLE. Sire, we have sought you at the request of her Majesty.—

KING. And found us in the villa of the Count de Bazan one of our most loyal subjects. Don Cæsar de Bazan, we appoint you Governor of Grenada.

D. CÆSAR. Valentia is also vacant, Sire.

KING. Would you prefer Valentia to Grenada?

D. CÆSAR. Valentia is one hundred leagues from Madrid, Sire, and beyond the reach of my creditors.

KING, (laughing.) Well, well, Governor of Valentia, be it then!

WITH RAPTURE GLOWING.

No. 28. FINALE. King, (R.) Maritana, Don Cæsar, (C.) Lazarillo. (L.)
